

Herman J. Narcho

Herman Narcho is Acting Branch Chief of Enforcement for the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs (OFCCP).

He started this OFCCP job in February 2014. Prior to his move to OFFCP, Herman had over 20 years of experience at the Department of Labor's Office of the Solicitor (SOL), where he provided legal advice on procurement, appropriation and intellectual property issues as well as litigated bid protest and contract claim cases. During his tenure at SOL, Herman also provided legal advice to SOL's Mine Safety and Health Division drafting and reviewing safety regulations for the Mine Safety and Health Administration and providing legal advice to all areas of DOL's Employment and Training Administration. He also has managed legislative and departmental communications between DOL, Congress and OMB. He was a law clerk to Judge Robert H. Hodges of the U.S. Court of Federal Claims and is a graduate of Georgetown Law School and Dartmouth College.